

ABSTRACT

An interpoly dielectric is formed using only a single layer of oxide and a single layer of nitride to allow a reduction in thickness. The nitride is thermally grown on silicon in a nitrogen environment to maintain a high quality layer, while the oxide is deposited by LPCVD.